

Dark Room

Tricks a Girl Can Do

Hannah Maynard (1834-1918) was a Canadian photographer who created surreal images after the death of her daughter; she was a proto-surrealist.

I will hang myself in picture frames in drawing rooms where grief is not allowed a wicker chair

then grimace back at this facade from umbrella eyes
under a cage of silver hair.

Look! I've learned to slice myself in three to sit politely at the table with ginger punch and teacake;

offer thin-lipped graves of pleasantries. I develop myself in the pharmacist's chemicals three women I'm loathe to understand—presences I sometimes cajole into modern light and shadow;

we culminate in a gelatin scene—
a daughter birthed from a spiral shell, a keyhole tall enough to strut through.

Endless Forms, More Beautiful

After a multiple exposure self-portrait of Hannah Maynard, c. 1894

So she keeps her herringbone hands busy with teacups and white flowers and murmurs to no one what she will create. No nephew sawed in half will interest her today, no devoted husband measuring buttes but a suitcase of her own bright follies. The living room pulses on and off with gunpowder expertly fitted for her flash. Or perhaps the room becomes a kind of snowbound mausoleum exhibiting her grief one winter afternoon. (It's quite impossible to know but let's presume.) No more inner voices to wake her from sleep, no more fussy wives who arrive with meat pies and then hurry their bosoms home to living daughters. In the frame, Hannahs stand here, sit there, bend over to brush a bouquet of lilies from other Hannah's hair.

From house left and then house right solitary Hannahs float like smoke rings into me. I should have known—the artful dodge, her concentric days, unwavering dark-sky stare—recognized my own pathology.

Strange Symmetry of Past, of Present

after a self-portrait set in a keyhole: late 1890's

Actually, the past does slip forward through a keyhole,

alive, feeding on our half-recounted facts and figures, penny-farthing bicycles and pancake breakfasts annually eaten.

How we learn to study it in private (the past)

like reading the phrasing of rare birds or fisherman sweaters or scat; to unlock the world in retrospect –

a human kind of heaven.

Take photography, for instance.
Here the 19th century returns

as Hannah poses herself in crisp black and white;

she's made a negative space on the threshold of a life-

sized paper cut-out: keyhole fit for the movie sets of Orson Welles (well before Orson was born).

Her figure stands neither in nor out of the century but floats.

She's her own avant-garde parade

a riddle, amulet, sunflower seed; comic, crazy, genius woman finding the multiplicity of things – patterns of desire across a face:

two dead daughters, ghost light, and similar fates.

The Tangible, Intangible

after a photograph by Hannah Maynard on the death of her child, c. 1884

Afterwards, she surveys the site:
the jostled cups, a buffalo rug

faded burlap of bookcase overstuffed with tromp l'oeil painted spines.

The sound of the photograph would be island rain
and the animal cry of the child gone—

In the darkroom she works alone cajoles waterfalls, brings to light the floating picture frame, the doily's difficult knowledge —

Commonplace days she survives with a mirror trick, a few glass plates that echo don't let go; let go.

Hannah, Decanter, and Cloud

~self portrait at 74

Age is still decanters on the table the size of small chandeliers or cloud foam. You, remember, are the one that is unmade as of yet, unknown. Medium merely to an image, a woman studio-posed. Self-portrait developed for the afterlife—our ticker-tape world

of tableaus and combs circling on. And. Then. Somehow your barnacled vessel lit from within like a carriage clock or sea-washed amber stones.
Have you been taken?

the Victorians inquired; from flesh into silver salts, into gaslight paper or gold? Everyone becoming older.

Your gaze darts forward, lifts beyond the mayor's clapperboard home, the dead dove, the séance, the bones.
One unknowable instant—

even as the aperture quietly holds, even as the light

decants over gloved hands that turn into clouds.
Don't tell me this is only a story.

Tell me there's more to our lives than jigsaws and doorknobs, more than tumbleweed, sediment or sex.
We live for the tunnel, the years signed together into the surreal, for our art imperfect and striving.
