

How Can Charles Brockden Brown Help Us Think about AI?

Biloquism reminds us that the questions of agency posed by generative AI are also always questions of imitation and authenticity.

Gaps in the Record: Teaching with the Constitutional Convention

Too often, historians turn to records of constituent or legislative deliberations from the eighteenth century as a source to draw quotations from early American political figures, without questioning their accuracy.

Uncle Tom's Cabin in the Hands of the Red Scared

Again and again, the filmstrip shows its viewers images of women in states of distress.

Mason-Dixon Lines

The boundary lines preceding Mason and Dixon, everybody knows, were a sham. What's to follow, despite the weighty authority of astronomical science, will be no better.

Editor's Note – Submission Going Down,
Down, Dragging me Down*

Happy New Year!

Words to Weapons: A History of the Abolition Movement from Persuasion to Force

FORCE AND FREEDOM

Black Abolitionists
and the Politics of Violence

Kellie Carter Jackson

With Force and Freedom, Carter Jackson makes a stimulating and insightful debut which will have a major influence on abolition movement scholarship.

The Brown Brothers had a Sister

Women's work is often hidden or marginal within historical records that were meant to show men's economic and political lives.

How to Read a Book: The X-Ray Method for Achieving a Sustainable "Book-Life"

Balance”

This is why you need a plan: to read attentively but efficiently, and sustainably, without surrendering your book-life balance.

Have You Seen Me?: Missing Works of Nineteenth-Century American Literature

Knowing what is missing is an important first step.

A Bell's Journey through Texas History

For those in later years, the bell's value lay not in its powerful sound, but in its visual representation.